THANK YOU!

CNCC students received more than 60 scholarships totaling over $73,000 this semester because of donors like you! Pictured are four of those students from the Aviation Maintenance Technician program. These students have dreams of working for commercial airlines, private pilots, and NASA. You have made their dreams possible!

Virtual Reality Enhances Learning

Humanities faculty Nicholas Swails requested some low-tech virtual reality equipment from the Foundation for use in his classes.

Here his music appreciation class experiences a virtual reality version of an orchestra performing a Mozart piece in a cathedral. When they turned their heads they could see all around them: the different instrument groups, the audience, the conductor, the cathedral ceiling and floor.

As they experienced the music live, you could see them really getting into the music. Pretty soon they were all standing up, naming the instrument groups and describing the conductor's movements. It was transformational! Everyone in the class was active, involved and responding to questions that integrated what they had learned about this period's music and the live performance!

The equipment has been used in several different classes now and has brought out similar excitement.
